

Scenes from River Farm

Japanese apricots (Prunus mume) in flower in River Farm's herb garden. Small deciduous trees native to Asia, Japanese apricots usually put forth their small, white, clove-scented blossoms in late winter or early spring. This year at River Farm a prolonged warm spell in winter encouraged some of the flowers to break bud in mid-January.